Marriages

Richardson—Allamand

The wedding of Arnold George Richardson of Vandyne, Alberta, and Miss Cecile Mary Allamand of Newcastle-on-Tyne England, was quietly solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Whitlock, by the Rev. F. Pike, Vicar of Alaskan, on Monday, June 7th.

His charming bride, is the daughter of Mrs. Fritz Allamand, of Newcastle-on-Tyne, England. Leaving England on May 23rd, Miss Allamand had a pleasant and uneventful voyage across the Atlantic, and duly arrived in Oyen, on Monday morning. The wedding ceremony took place on Monday afternoon, and on the following morning the happy couple left for their home near Vandyne.

A Remarkable Hen

Mr. Dan McQuarrie of Excel has a remarkable hen. After hatching a batch of chickens in which it evinced a great deal of motherly interest, it was much disturbed one morning to find that all its young charges had been taken away. Its instinct for mothering something was so strong that it investigated a nearby barn in which four young pups resided, and finding them to its liking, took up residence there. When the mother of the pups came round she received a warm reception and had to hunt a hurried retreat. Subsequently some understanding was evidently arrived at and the mother of the pups was allowed to feed her young ones, but at night the hen would jealously guard her new charges and cover them with her wings to keep them warm.

The funeral service of the late Clarence Caswell, of Acadia Valley, was conducted in the Methodist Church, Oyen, yesterday at 12:30 by the Rev. F. Pike, Vicar of Alaskan. After the service, the cortege left for the Oyen cemetery where the burial took place.

The deceased, who was only 21 years old, was the adopted son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles of Acadia Valley, and came to this district last year, when he commenced homesteading.

Suffering from appendicitis, the unfortunate young man died at the Benton station, on Monday morning, June 7th, while waiting for the train to take him to Saskatoon, where he was to undergo an operation.

The German "Reply"

Nothing could be more unsatisfactory than the German reply to the American note; but then nothing could be more impossible than for the Germans to make a satisfactory reply to that interesting document. President Wilson very kindly assumed that there might be something which the Berlin Government could say which would make the Lusitania-Gulf fight-Palapa situation look all right; but he must have known perfectly well that there wasn't, and that Berlin would not say it if there was. Anyhow they haven't said it, and it now becomes a question of how long the Americans will tolerate an insulting silence on half the points of the American note and a still more insulting contradiction on the other half. If we were an American in Germany we would purchase a ticket for a neutral border immediately.

It is interesting to note how the American press, eschewing from the keep-the-argument-going character of the German communication, that Germany is not exactly anxious to get the U.S. into the war, is much more cheerful about the United States going into war than it was a few weeks ago. There was, we believe at that time a genuine conviction among many Americans that for their country to join the Allies would merely be playing the German game. That conviction is fading ground, while the instinct to exact reparation for many German infamies is increasing. The example of Italy may have afforded some stimulus. The New Yorkers have inspected the American navy and found it good. The Lusitania victims are still dead; the sorrow and anger over them are not. The Berliner Tageblatt thinks that the Americans will forget about the Lusitania soon; but the Tageblatt puts too great a strain on the American forgettery.—Beck's Weekly.

And now we wonder what the context of Wilson's reply is. The new note, which caused a cabinet crisis, culminating in Secretary Bryan's resignation, was started on its way to Berlin on Tuesday afternoon, shortly after two o'clock.

After reading Secretary Bryan's statement which was given out shortly after his resignation, it is clear that President Wilson's note does not show any timidity of spirit. On the contrary, it is believed to state in no uncertain terms, that the United States, while adverse to

Continue the Song

We are sorry for the German residents of the Blaine Lake School District, Saskatchewan. There is a sweet simplicity about them which is most engaging. The non-German school children of Blaine Lake have been singing lately a little song entitled "Here's to the Day." The German residents are annoyed at this song and have protested to the Department of Education. An inspector has been sent down to pacify the district. The inspector's name was Meyer. The district was not pacified. The non-German school children are singing "Here's to the Day," with a greatly increased fervor, now that they know that by singing it they can annoy the Germans. Premier Scott has written a "conciliatory" letter, commending patriotic songs generally and suggesting that some patriotic songs in some places may be a little unwise. The German residents are reported to be undecided whether to learn to sing Premier Scott's letter or the Hymn of Hate, as an antidote to the prevalent ballad.

We earnestly hope that the children of the Blaine Lake School District will go on singing "Here's to the Day" until the day is past and over.

Once again Britannia's sons are standing side by side

The die is cast, the day is come, the sword must now decide

The German war lord in his pride has thrown the challenge down

He is in the right we now must fight for England, home and crown,

His mad ambition we'll resist. We're not afraid of his mailed fist.

Chorus—

"Here's to the Day" has been their toast,

"Here's to the Day" has been their toast,

The Day has come but not our seeking. Bugles call and guns are speaking.

"Have ye heard about Jim? He's been wounded by the Germans. Ain't it terrible?"

"How's he been wounded?"

"It seems that the Germans have cut off his retreat."
